Redstone wins 5 year SAN project with University College Dublin

29th May 2007 – Redstone, the national IT and Communications solutions provider, today announces that it has received orders to deliver the initial stage of a five year project to supply University College Dublin ("UCD") with a complete Hewlett Packard ("HP") storage solution.

As Ireland's preferred HP supplier, Redstone Technology will be supplying a solution capable of scaling up to a capacity of 300 terabytes and will ultimately be one of the largest HP storage solutions installed in Ireland. The value of the initial stage of the project is €730,000, with an ultimate project value of up to €4.5m over 5 years.

Redstone and UCD are implementing the solution to support the academic, teaching and research activities of the University's 3,000 staff and 22,000 under & post graduate students across the 5 colleges and research institutes.

Shaun Kennedy, CTO from UCD commented, "We evaluated all the options that were open to us to put in place a major storage solution that could fulfill our existing needs and, importantly, our future needs. Redstone put together the most compelling package combining excellent service levels, an understanding of our requirements and trustworthy HP architecture. We look forward to working with them as preferred supplier and being able to securely store the wealth of data we generate here at UCD."

Martin Balaam, CEO Redstone commented, "Following Redstone Converged Solutions' successful bid for the £16m Lancashire "Building Schools for the Future" project, I am delighted that our Technology division is also able to demonstrate that it can meet one of our key objectives and secure long term contracts of significant value to the Group.

"We have now shown that the Converged Solutions, Managed Solutions and Technology divisions are all capable of winning these types of contracts – both independently and through collaboration with each other. The recent addition of Comunica to our Converged Solutions division increases our strength significantly in bidding for large projects and I hope that we will continue our success in these areas."
